REPORT

OF THE

COMMISSIONER OF STREETS.

To the City Council;

The undersigned, Commissioner of Streets, submits the following Report, with the accompanying schedules.

The amount appropriated for the Highway department for the municipal year eighteen hundred and fifty-three, was $10,000. The amount expended by me is $9,853 62; from which sum I have paid for six horses and a set of double harnesses, $1,200; for planks, post-timber and nails for sidewalks and repairs of bridges, $1,920; for flag and curb stones, $204 73; for one double horse wagon, $85; for one horse cart, $32 50. There were two horses on hand at the commencement of the year, which now remain in my possession. During the winter they have paid something more than their keeping which amount has been paid into the Treasury as will appear below.

The balance of the money amounting to $68[illegible] 1 has been expended by me in making and repairing streets and sidewalks and in clearing the streets, as will appear by schedule marked A.

The expenses on the sidewalks during the year have been very large. Some new walks have been built, and many that were out of repair and unsafe have been renewed, principally of plank and grave which though a more expensive method at first, I think far preferable owing to their greater durability and safety. I would recommend to the City Council hereafter to build all sidewalks, where it is practicable, of stone and gravel or in some manner which will make them more permanent and less liable to get out of repair and consequently to cause accidents, than those built of plank simply. For the detailed reasons for such change would refer to my report of last year on this subject.

I have disposed of the six horses purchased by me, for $1200, and paid the money into the Treasury. I have also paid into the Treasury $200 81, received of various persons for jobs of work performed by the teams. Which sums deducted from the amount drawn out leaves from the appropriation of the Highway Fund $1547 57.

The property of the department now on hand will appear in schedule marked B.

It has been customary to recommend to the City Council a sum to be raised for the Highway department for the ensuing year, but as Gen. Veazie's contract upon the roads will expire the present spring, and as the roads are in very bad condition, many of them under indictment, it is impossible for me to give any definite idea as to the amount which will be necessary to repair them.

I might here be state that there has been a sum of about $500 paid from the Treasury by the City Council during the past winter for breaking out roads embraced in the contract of Gen. Veazie, just referred to.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. P. WINGATE, Commissioner of Streets.

SMOOTHING IRON!

MANY important improvements have been made since the beginning of the present century, relieving and facilitating the labor of men by machinery and other modern implements, but females have been nearly neglected until the attention of the Patent Self Heating Smoothing Iron, which will relieve them, in a very great degree, from the obnoxious and fatiguing labor of Ironing, besides being a great saving of time and expense. This Iron combines economy, convenience, saving of labor and dispatch; one cent's worth of dry charcoal disappears for a whole day's constant ironing. Hard wood coal from the stove will answer the same purpose It can be used in any room in the house Hatters' and Tailors' Irons are constructed upon this same principle, and possess equal superiority

Third Lecture before the Bangor Horticultural Society.

Mr Waring's third lecture before the Bangor Horticultural Society, was delivered at the Court House, on Saturday evening last, on the subject of manures. It was one of the best of the course suggestive, practical and highly interesting and valuable, and its teachings will be heeded by those who listened to its delivery.

This course of lectures has proved the importance of such lectures, and the money value alone to our city may rightfully be reckoned by thousands of dollars, while at the same time the purity, cleanliness, and comfort of many homes may be greatly promoted by an immediate and easy neutralizing of offensive gases from the waste and wash of the house and stable.

It would afford us great satisfaction to be able to lay before our readers a full report of all these lectures, and particularly the last; but we can only furnish to them a pretty close report of that portion of the last are devoted to composting manures, showing the manipulations, the practical working the Asse of the manner of doing it, as being, on the whole, though not the most interesting, yet the most valuable for practical men.

Without attaching too much value to the next part, we would suggest that those into whose hands it may fall, lay it aside for future frequent reference, what practice in the business of composting shall make it desirable to refer to the manner suggested by Mr. Waring.

At the conclusion of the lecture an interesting conversation was had, and several resolutions were passed, which will appear in another place in our columns.

We think the officers of the Bangor Horticultural Society, richly deserve the thanks of the members of that Society, and of the community, for their timely enterprise in securing the delivery of these lectures in our city.

On the subject of composting, Mr. Waring said: We will examine the treatment of night manures, and see how they may be most economically preserved.

For general farm purposes, there is no question as to advantageous as that of composting, and the great secret of its success lies in the power of vegetable muck and charcoal to absorb ammonia and other fertilizing gases. Charcoal, in an agricultural sense means all forms of carbon, vegetable mould, soot, leaf mould, river and swamp deposits, decomposed saw dust, decayed wood, spent tan bark, ashes mould, charcoal from spark catchers of locomotives. In short any organic matter decomposed with the partial exception of oil, the carbon it contains is produced in nearly pure form. The best means of causing this decomposition in a cheap way, is by the aid of the lime and salt mixture. The mixture is made by slacking three bushels of shell lime, or lime containing but little magnesia in one bushel of salt dissolved in water—Salt is composed of two of the inorganic constituents of plants called chlorine and soda.—Lime is another constituent of vegetable nature and is used in its pure state. The chlorine of the salt preferring lime to soda leaves the soda and unites with the lime, forming chloride of lime; while the soda uniting with the nitrogen of the atmosphere becomes one form of saltpetre. This and carbonate of lime have both much more power in decomposing woody fibre than either salt or lime.

Vegetable muck we have as a class of chemically being usually most accessible. The muck should be carted to the manure shed and composted in the proportion of one cord of muck to four bushels of the lime mixture. At the end of thirty days or more, this will be ready for the manures. A compost should not be made by pitching on the ground, under the shed, ten inches of muck, covering it with a thin layer of fresh manure, then another layer of muck and one of manure, until the whole is complete, topping off with fifteen or eighteen inches of muck. The floor of the muck shed should be constructed so as to drain toward one corner. At this corner, a tub or hogshead should be sunk. Into this sink pour urine, soapsuds, ammoniacal liquor, sheep suds, house wash and rain water. Let openings be made in the top of the heap by thrusting in repeatedly a crowbar or stake, pour the liquor in the tank upon the top of the heap, filling all the holes and saturating the whole heap from top to bottom, allowing it to drain back into the tank; thus saturate the heap twice a week.—At the end of a month or so, this heap will be thoroughly decomposed, and may be carted out without loss of time. The muck, from its decomposition by the lime and salt mixture, is nearly pure carbon, and retains all the fertilizing gases produced by the fermentation of the manures giving them up to the roots of plants.

The liquor, by being repeatedly thrown over the heap, tends to keep it sufficiently moist for perfect fermentation, carries the soluble parts of the portion to every other portion, thus equalizing its quality and, rendering to the heap all that was abstracted by the leaching. If the heap should be too great it reduces it, thus preventing fire fanging. In short, it obviates the necessity for turning by hand—producing the same results much more perfectly and cheaply. When the water subsides in the heap, air enters the space, is occupied, thus keeping up fresh supplies of gases to assist in the decomposing process. Should ammonia be found escaping, a larger quantity of muck may be thrown on to take it up and prevent its loss.

No water should be allowed to reach the manures, except such as is used in the tank, and this should not be changed as it contains a larger quantity of the soluble constituents of the manures.

By proper composting, manure may be increased to many times its value. Prof. Mapes has decomposed nine yards loads of muck with four hundred bushels of the lime and salt mixture, and composted it with eight loads of fresh horse dung, producing one hundred loads fully equal to a like quantity of pure stable manure prepared in the usual manner. Indeed, one cord of muck, containing the soda chlorine and lime of four bushels of the mixture, is unquestionably equal in value to a cord of manure which has been lying all winter in an open barn yard.

Let us consider in what way we may render the liquid manure (urine) most available. This liquid contains the nitrogen and the soluble inorganic portions of the digested food, and as these are the most important to vegetation, the liquid manures are even more valuable than the dung.

In Flanders, where economy of farming is the only thing many farmers have to live by the urine of the cow is valued at $10 per year. It is probably worth nearly that here if properly taken care of. A long time before the action of ammonia in the vegetable economy was known, European farmers used to make sal-ammonia by the using of the ammonia of putrid urine with muriatic acid.

In composting the solid dung, as described the urine may all be made use of to supply the tank with fluid, but where an system of composting is adopted not requiring this, it may be directly applied to vegetable muck heaps forming independent composts. A more convenient course, however, is in most cases to dig out the bottoms of the stalls to the depth of three or four feet and fill them up with prepared muck—that which has been decomposed by the lime and salt mixture. This will absorb the urine as soon as voided, and while yet warm with the animal heat, and his will greatly accelerate decomposition, and at the end of ten days the muck may be removed to the compost heap and a new quantity supplied. The quantity of valuable manure which would be produced by a single cow must be large, and as has, in every case, been found a most profitable investment of labor.

When cattle are kept in yards or stables, their manure should be removed every morning, and composted, under cover, with prepared muck, or its equivalent. It always will be sprinkled little plaster around stables to absorb the ammonia arising from the manures dropped before they can be removed.

The organic matter in manure heaps may be much increased by throwing in weeds, straw leaves, and all other refuse matters. These may also be thrown into hog pens to be rooted over and thus decomposed, though muck should be plentifully supplied to absorb the gases arising from the decomposition of the manure.—Weeds, &c., composed with animal excrements will have their seeds killed by the resultant heat of fermentation. One bushel of salt to each cord of the compost will kill all seeds and grubs.

The solid manure of the horse is better than that of the ox, while the ox produces liquid manure proportionably better than that of the horse. The manure of the pig pen is much richer than that of the stable, and should be preserved with equal care. If large quantities of prepared muck be put into the pens, the rooting of the hogs becomes valuable labor, while if they turn over their manure without proper absorbents to take up the valuable gases, much of value will escape in consequence of the exchanging and exposure and compacting of the decomposing matters. Hog manure mixed with muck is said to be equal to guano for turnips.

Poultry dung is the most valuable of all domestic manure. Birds live on the nicest kinds of grain, seeds insects, meat, fish, &c., and void their solid and liquid excrements together. Dry poultry dung is worth seventy-five cents a bushel as guano is worth $50 per ton. Poultry dung may be saved by sprinkling muck under the roosts and renewing it once or twice a week, until the whole is required for use.

Night soil or human manure stands at the head of the list for value as a fertilizer. Its odor is entirely due to the escape of gases, and these may be arrested in the same ways as those arising from any other effete matters. From the quantities of ammonia and soluble matters it contains, night soil is more likely to supply deficiencies in the soil than any other domestic manures. Indeed, it is the only one that can be depended on in restoring fertility to worn out lands without the aid of the practical chemist. It is cheaper at fifteen cents per ton than stable manure at one dollar. All kinds of muck, plaster, and chloride of lime entirely destroy its odor by fixing its gases as soon as formed. The prepared muck for composting is peculiarly adapted to this use, from the available condition of its constituents. If this preparation be occasionally thrown into privies their contents may be removed when wanted, without any unpleasantness.

Levee and Sale.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier:

Permit me, through you, to call attention to the notice of the Corban Levee and sale, given in your paper of to-day. The ladies of the Corban Society—of whose high respectability and moral worth nothing need be said in this community—have been plying their needles, for the last ten years for the increase of the Library of the Theological Seminary. And they have actually purchased books to the amount of more than a thousand dollars, besides affording important aid to the Seminary in other ways. But the present Library Room of the Seminary is full. Besides, this valuable Library, amounting to nearly ten thousand volumes, is in a very exposed situation—in a wooden house, where several fires are kept constantly burning. In these circumstances it occurred to these ladies last autumn, that instead of laboring further at present for the Library, they had better look directly at the greater want of the Seminary, and Sim at the speedy erection of a fire-proof Chapel and Library Room. For this object they have been at work during the past long winter. For this object they propose to open, next Thursday evening, a Levee and Sale in the City Hall. The enterprise deserves a great amount of labor on these benevolent ladies; but they cheerfully undertake it, in promotion of the important object which they have in view.

It is resolved that the whole affair shall be conducted on the most honorable principles; and no effort will be spared to make the evening a pleasant and profitable one to those who may be present. The tickets are afforded very low—some think quite too low; but the holders of tickets will have an opportunity of aiding the Society and the object in various ways, after they are admitted. Let there, then, be a liberal patronage. It is hoped that no gentleman or lady will stay away, who can with any convenience attend.

Mr. Waring's Lectures.

At the close of the course of lectures delivered before the Bangor Horticultural Society by G. E. Waring Jr. Esq., of New York the following resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That the members of the Bangor Horticultural Society, and subscribers to the course of lectures on scientific and practical Agriculture delivered before them by G. E. Waring Jr. Esq., have been highly gratified with the mass of valuable information derived from the lectures, and would recommend Mr. Waring and his lectures to the various Agricultural and Horticultural Societies in the State.

Resolved, That we believe that the Agricultural prosperity of Maine will be greatly promoted by a general acquaintance with the principles of Agricultural science taught by Mr. Waring in his lectures.

Resolved, That we give our thanks to Mr. Waring for the ability, patience and intelligence with which he has unfolded to us the laws of nature applicable to Agriculture; and for the modes suggested by him for making them easily applicable to practical purposes.

Voted, That all the papers in the city be requested to publish these resolutions.

Editors and What is Expected of them without charge.

There is many a journalist now languishing in poverty, while dozens to whose success in life he gave the first impetus roll by him in their carriages, and have forgotten his very existence. There is no country save ours, in the world, where journalists are expected to do so much work for the special benefit of others without recompense. Generally out of this country, editors are inaccessible, if not anonymous if they may let you know what they think, but not who makes it. You cannot write an editor's room in London or Paris, and ask him to devote his columns to your own advancement or profit. Here this is done every day, even by utter strangers.

Half an editor's time sometimes this whole day, is wrung over the proper work into the night—is given up to receiving the calls, listening to the stories, and obeying the requests of one good natured friend after another who drops in to try his chance of getting an item as valuable an advertisement part of him for nothing as he would be likely to get out of the publisher by regular paying. He feels the loss nothing, let he has plenty of brass left, if he succeeds, for he has used his face to decided advantage. And then civility is used—this is good feeling imposed upon.

Many an editor receives several letters in a day requesting him to do this or that to documents—for the benefit of dirty managers or mere acquaintances, who have no shadow of claim to the item.—Tribune.

The proposed new cent is to be of white metal, resembling silver in appearance, with raised and slightly raised edge. It is about 8-10ths of an inch in diameter, larger than a quarter eagle and smaller than a twenty-five cent piece. There is to be no hole in the coin, as has been suggested in some of the papers. It may be readily distinguished from other coins of about the same size, and will be a great convenience.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills, the great Remedies justly ever known for Colds and Rheumatism. Extract of a letter from Mr. Thomas Williams, of Llandilo, Wales, dated April 28, 1851:—"To Professor Holloway—Sir—I am completely cured by your Pills and Ointment, and should be publicly known. I was for a long time severely afflicted and confined from chronic rheumatism, and lost the use of my right side of my body, and entirely lost my speech. The doctors could do me no good, and I was under different medical treatment, but all to no purpose. Your Ointment and Pills, used in accordance with your printed directions, have entirely restored to health and strength."

LOTS of Land or Rural Dwelling Houses, with large Fruit and Vegetable Gardens, adjoining the City, on the continuation of Union and Broadway, and a short distance from State Street to the Park. The land is out about 150 rods through the land, leading over the west end of Mt. Pleasant. The land is north of and much higher than the city, having a commanding view of the city and surrounding country.

Also, land for Orcharding and Farming, on the new Stage Road to Oldtown running by Smith's Mills, situate beyond and near the first range of hills, the elevation, having views of some parts of the city on its western side. This land is considered as good as the farm of which I have raised over 40 bushels of wheat to the acre, can be seen on the books of the P. M. Wood of said farm, hay and pasture on this farm for one or two cows. My judgment may be had for a number of acres and for fruit Trees on my lot near the city, of Hamlin and Downing trees and Dana's Red Sweets.

My land East of Penobscot river is unsurpassed by any in the vicinity. We can go there in one hour. I will warrant the title against lands running out of Bangor.

Liberal terms will be given on the above lots made to suit purchasers.

These streets will afford some of the most desirable sites for elegant Houses and valuable Rural Establishments, without exception. It is now a strong wish to be relieved from part of my estate, an idea of closing business of this kind may open all induce me to sell at this time. Title perfect.

BRIGGS'

Green Mountain Vegetable CEMENT,

FOR uniting Broken China, Glass, Earthenware, Metals, Wood, Coquet Work, and Fancy Articles of every description. This Cement, which has been proved to be of great strength, will be found particularly useful in every family. The simple manner of its application is shown in accompanying directions. The adhesive property which it possesses is so wonderful that many things will sooner break in a fresh place than where they have been mended with it. The variety of purposes for which it may be used, are so numerous, that it would be difficult to quote them. Its success in fixing Glass, China, &c., is extraordinary, as evidence of great heat affects it, and as the joints are scarcely perceptible, articles of this kind need not be laid useful for years, which otherwise would have been cast away. The above article is now for wholesale or retail, of GEO. W. ENDERSON, No. 4 Smith's Block, General Agent for the State of Maine.

THE MOST EXTRAORDINARY AND thrilling tale of modern times

We have no hesitation in pronouncing "The Lamp-lighter" one of the most original, interesting, graphic and affecting tales that has lately appeared.—Boston Daily Morning Traveller.

For delicate and forcible delineation of character, this work is hardly excelled.—Boston Journal.

The "Lamplighter" abounds many sarcasms and ridicules and infidelity, there now it may be there is much of darkness and despair.—Boston Daily Bee.

The Life of "Little Gerty," as portrayed in "The Lamplighter," is as pleasing as affecting, is the best sketches of Dickens.—April 2. Daily Advertiser.

The "Lamplighter" teaches important truths which cannot be too frequently impressed upon the minds of all,—and in the classical correctness of diction, and tasteful selection of terms which indicate the good English scholar, is much superior to Uncle Tom's Cabin.—Boston Daily Atlas.

☞On the receipt of one dollar we will forward a copy of the Lamplighter, either by mail or otherwise, as directed, to any address.

CLOTHE YOURSELVES!

Friends and patrons, I must ask your aid,

In giving work to one who does it well;

Come! one and all, and do not be afraid,

For deeds, not speech, in me you shall excel.

In work, or else wages, I will give satisfaction

To any one who is candid of judging,

I will ask all, only worth every fraction,

Who will not, give me it as may be a budging.

But come and see me, call at Number Ten,

At East Market Square, in the Granite Block,

Up two flights of stairs, are there,

Walk in—you needn't stop to knock.

Here you'll find me at my occupation,

Either cutting, or else repairing

Clothes for myself or others—in or out of fashion,

Where there is at present much complaining.

Repairing Clothes at present is my hobby,

And I set my work with good silk and linen,

Come! you the last your doctor from your body,

I'll make it look as well as at beginning!

Or at least I'll try, although I'm getting old,

Not like to One who notices the sparrow,

That Providence fed my own count, hold!

My motto is what ever I can,

Nothing looks so improbable to those who have not yet tried it as the wonderful operations of the day as the experiment now going upon the constitutions, and things old as one would think cannot obtain credence, however strong the evidence yet it is now a fixed fact—it [illegible] have a humor. Try it then. There are no ifs nor ands about it, nothing obscure, but sure yours. He has meddled over a thousand cases of it in the vicinity of Boston and knows the effects of it in every case. It does not be slackened—they always disappear in from four days to a week. There is never a bad case from it—on the contrary if you find that feeling a [illegible] ne, you will find yourself in a new person. I heard some of his most extraordinary cures of it that ever came under my notice. I started it let over necessary. But the fact enough of it.
